Solving Conservation Puzzles

Welcome to Elise Zipkin's Quantitative Ecology Lab

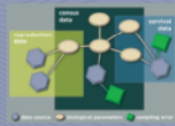

Our lab develops statistical models to unravel some of the world's most alarming natural mysteries at the intersection of ecology, conservation biology, and the management of biodiversity. We study the status, trends and dynamics of populations and communities – insects, birds, amphibians, fish, reptiles, and mammals.

Our mission: to understand and predict how and why nature is changing, the consequences of those changes, and what, if any, action is recommended.

Research

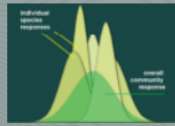

Data Integration

We combine multiple data types to estimate species patterns across space and time relative to environmental variables.

More on data integration

Community Models

We evaluate both individual species impacts as well as critical community responses and metrics of biodiversity.

Unmarked Data Models

We develop models to estimate species abundance and biological parameters from the most widely available data types.

We are committed not just to open science, but to developing code that is easily accessible and reproducible. Visit the lab's Github archive

The hero section features a light green background with a central pink logo that reads "Mikey's Kitchen" in a stylized font with a flame over the 'y', and "good food fast" in a smaller font below it. The logo is surrounded by images of various food items: a plate of orange-glazed wings, a plate of a sandwich with meat, cheese, and vegetables, a plate of fried chicken, a plate of fish and chips, and a plate of a salad with cucumbers and tomatoes.

Mikey's Story

For the LOVE OF FOOD

Mikey's Kitchen grew out of a need for catering production space and a desire to bring non-pretentious, high quality food to the community. Our menu items are made from scratch and use only the best possible ingredients. We serve many vegetarian options and use primarily halal meats which have a higher standard of processing. We do not serve pork products.

Inspired BY FAMILY

Growing up in the 50's and 60's, food and family were plentiful. We were friendly with our neighbors and involved in our neighborhoods. Mothers made a lot of pot luck dinners and creative sandwiches on those Formica counter tops with the colored boomerangs.

Mikey's Kitchen's logo is homage to my mother, Genny, and my mother in law, Dolores, who shared their joy of cooking and baking with me and never failed to feed their families tasty and wholesome meals from those countertops. Their memories are certainly a blessing.

Continuing EXCELLENCE

We wouldn't have the menu we have today without the influence of Mr. Thursday and his wife Elizabeth. They had the secrets of the BEST wings and fish and they taught them to me. I am forever grateful.

So stop in and pick up a sandwich or a fresh baked cookie. Take home some delicious wings or crispy fish. Be a part of our community, you'll be treated like family!

Enjoy!
Mikey
